

The 20th International Symposium on Polar Sciences:
Our Collective Journey to Connect the Past and Future from the Antarctic

May 27-28, 2014

Korea Polar Research Institute, Songdo, Incheon
Republic of Korea

First Circular

We are pleased to announce that Korea Polar Research Institute will hold the 20th International Symposium on Polar Sciences in Songdo, Incheon, Republic of Korea on May 27-28, 2014.

This symposium series was born with the launch of our Antarctic research and has served as an opportunity for us to stay abreast with the trends in polar research and also to elaborate future efforts with international colleagues.

We are particularly pleased to invite you to this year's symposium where we will celebrate its 20th anniversary conjoined with KOPRI's 10 year anniversary as an independent institute. The theme is appropriately titled "Our Collective Journey to Connect the Past and Future from the Antarctic". The objective is to frame a pivotal perspective on the road we have paved for ourselves as well as on the future outlook of Antarctic research.

The overview and preliminary program of "The 20th International Symposium on Polar Sciences will be provided soon on the symposium website (<http://symposium.kopri.re.kr>), from January 20th, 2014.

* Abstract Submission: January 20th –March 7th, 2014.

We are looking forward to your participation.
